

Kline's Weekly Carlisle Gazette
Feb. 28, 1812

At Louisville the gable ends of houses have tumbled down ...

Muskingum Messenger
(Zanesville, OH)
Feb. 12, 1812
pg. 3, col. 4

Louisville, February 7

Another Earthquake - This morning, about fifteen minutes past three o'clock, equally or more severe, and of longer duration, than any experienced hitherto, at this place. No injury was sustained, except a few chimnies, and part of some parapet walls, which were broken off.

Otsego Herald
Feb. 22, 1812

We also understand that letters have been received from Louisville, Falls of Ohio, which state, that the houses have suffered considerable damage at that place.

McMurtie, H. (1819)
pg. 239

7th, 3 h. 15 m A.M. the most tremendous earthquake yet experienced at this place, preceded by frequent slight motions for several minutes, duration of great violence at least four minutes, then gradually moderated by exertions of lessening strength, ....